

Party Membership

There is widespread misunderstanding as to who is a member of the Democratic Party. Just pulling a Democratic ballot when you vote in the Primary Election does not make you a party member. When you register to vote, you do not declare a party affiliation. You need to fill out an application and mail it into party headquarters. You can find a copy of the membership form on this webpage that you can fill out and then mail. Or if you have not done so in advance you can fill out a membership application when you show up at your location for the Presidential Preference Poll and Precinct Club meeting.
